Family Campfire Skillet

With a name like "Family Campfire Skillet", you might be surprised that it's only a 6" diameter and not some big old 18" frying pan. How are you supposed to feed a family with that? Well actually that's not the point.

The idea behind the Family Campfire Skillet is to help introduce the concepts and ideas of outdoor cooking to kids with the help of their parents or older siblings. By taking a small cast iron skillet and attaching a long wood and steel handle, the child can safely try cooking food like eggs, sandwiches and pancakes while mom and dad help by flipping the food and the more dangerous aspects of outdoor cooking. The child cooks by standing and holding onto the long angled wood handle, safely away from the heat. Try one for everyone in the family.
